

Taxes are obsolete!

In the past, taxation was the only method by which the needs of a government and nation could be financed.

However, there is now a better way that does not breed resentment and hostility as such extortion does.

Freedom from the slavery of taxation!

misnomer. Taxes by their very nature are unfair and dangerous. When you take from those who earn the most in order to maintain services for everyone, sooner or later those who are paying become very angry and those who benefit from entitlements are considered a drain to society's producers. No matter how valid the desire to “help the needy” may be, financing it through legal extortion is outdated and is no longer necessary — if we have the courage to adopt a new economic system which works differently.

You deserve to keep what you earn!

Imagine being able to keep every bit of the money you earn, and spend it only on luxuries. Think it's not possible? Think again.

Net Benefitism

In order to grasp how we can escape the burden of taxes and simplify our lives by eliminating arduous tasks like budgeting and other paperwork we must truly think outside the proverbial box. We must picture a world in which money comes into existence when we earn it and ceases to exist when we spend it. Money which resides in computer accounts, much like those we currently have but with one HUGE difference: this sort of money has no physical representation and it cannot be transferred from one those who provide them are paid for doing so. Capital goods are free, too, because the only way anyone can earn money is by providing net benefit to others. The money supply is kept roughly equivalent to the goods and services available for sale as luxuries, so there is never any shortage. For more information, please visit our website WWW.NOPOM.INFO
